COURSE DIRECTOR: Susan Roth, MD
20 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™
This four-day course has been designed for radiologists interested in breast and women’s imaging. Three half-days are dedicated to breast imaging so that we can meet MQSA requirements and offer up to 15 hours in Breast Imaging. Topics will include digital mammography, ultrasound, interventional procedures and MRI. The section on women’s imaging will concentrate on the uses of US and CT in gynecology, obstetrics, and diseases of the thyroid.
Course Objectives

Upon completion of the program, participants will be able to:

✔ Optimize and improve the performance and interpretation of breast MRI examinations

✔ Use tips to minimize pitfalls in MR imaging of the breast

✔ Apply the latest principals, techniques and optimization in order to perform imaging guided breast biopsies

✔ Outline the principals and methods for implementing digital mammography and computed-aided detection (CAD) into practice

✔ Evaluate appropriate imaging modalities and their indications for screening women at high risk for the development of breast cancer

✔ Appraise new technologies in breast imaging and evaluate their potential role and appropriate use in the evaluation of breast disease

✔ Employ ultrasound in the evaluation of pelvic masses and acute pelvic pain

✔ Discuss state-of-the-art imaging of the thyroid

✔ Effectively use ultrasound in the evaluation of the pregnant patient
